

falling from a taxi,
hammering on the door
like he's waking up his past-
his dad staggering home to his mum.

She drives our pick-up truck to the ferry.
His head lolls on my shoulder.
He'll be in bed for a week. Her curls drop. I squint into the sun.