

Performance piece

(An artwork consisting of a banana duct-taped to a wall was recently eaten by a hungry gallery visitor in South Korea, who then stuck the empty skin back up. The piece – called 'Comedian' – originally sold for £91,000. Can you guess which of the items below have been displayed as art?)

The peel from your satsuma –

Is it ART?

An empty tin of tuna –

Is it ART?

A gigantic stack of socks,
piled up in a cardboard box –

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

A dishevelled unmade bed –

Is it ART?

All the stuff that's in the shed –

Is it ART?

A bare room with neon lights,
filled with seven tons of rice –

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

Screwed-up paper from the bin –

Is it ART?

Getting toothpaste on your chin –

Is it ART?

A ham sandwich growing mould,
Or a toilet made of gold –

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

If it hasn't got a frame –

Is it ART?

If it's purely done for fame –

Is it ART?

Is a sculpture more exciting,
than the poem we're reciting –?

Is it ART?

Is it ART?

IS IT ART?
